Note: On infrequent occasions a series number is assigned to a volume of such large size and cost that it cannot be included as part of the subscription to Treaties and Other International Acts, the subscription price of which is based on the normal size of the pamphlets or leaflets in which the Acts customarily appear. When such a volume is issued, it is GPO policy to bring the matter to the immediate attention of all subscribers, in order that they may account for the series number omitted from their subscription, and to give them an opportunity to obtain the volume in question, if they wish to do so.

Gist

Gist is a two-page brief that covers a variety of topics relating to U.S. foreign policy. It is not intended to be a comprehensive U.S. policy statement but rather a quick reference aid providing a concise summary of a problem or issue.

- "Air Defense Equipment for Saudi Arabia," September 1981
- "Afghanistan," October 1981
- "New World Information Order," October 1981
- "Agriculture in U.S. Foreign Economic Policy," November 1981

Atlas of U.S. Foreign Relations

Recent issues of the Department of State Bulletin include a series of maps on important elements of U.S. foreign relations. The September and December issues of the Bulletin concluded a three-part series on international economic affairs, which began in July 1981. The July edition illustrated some of the elements and institutions of the world economy. The September Bulletin feature compared the current U.S. trade and investment position with a previous period or year. And the December issue dealt with the history and achievements of international development assistance. Subscriptions and individual copies of the Bulletin are available from GPO (see page 4).

Post Report

The following booklets are part of a series that provides diplomats with an introduction to their host countries. Although a small part of a typical Post Report is of use only to diplomatic personnel, most information is applicable to the general traveler. The reports provide information on geography, climate, population, transportation, communications, health facilities, clothing, and more.

Films

The State Department distributes a four-part film series, "The History of U.S. Foreign Relations," and "From Where I Sit," an examination of how public opinion affects foreign policy decisions.

The History of U.S. Foreign Relations

Using actual locations, paintings, political cartoons, and documentary footage, this series of four 30-minute color films recreates the history of U.S. foreign relations from the American Revolution to mid-1975. "An Age of Revolutions" documents American diplomacy from the American Revolution through the Monroe Doctrine. "Youth to Maturity" traces the expansion of American interests and the evolution of the United States into a major world power prior to the events of World War I. "The Reluctant World Power" illustrates the increasing involvement of the United States in world affairs engendered by the events of the period between the wars. "The Road to Interdependence" outlines the development of U.S. foreign policy from the end of World War II through the onset of the 1970s.

From Where I Sit

This film explores the many conflicting interests and opinions which converge on foreign policy issues and shape our national goals. Using the issues of trade, energy, and arms control, the film provides a basis for discussion of the kinds of decisions and choices confronting policymakers.

Films

The History of U.S. Foreign Relations

Using actual locations, paintings, political cartoons, and documentary footage, this series of four 30-minute color films recreates the history of U.S. foreign relations from the American Revolution to mid-1975. "An Age of Revolutions" documents American diplomacy from the American Revolution through the Monroe Doctrine. "Youth to Maturity" traces the expansion of American interests and the evolution of the United States into a major world power prior to the events of World War I. "The Reluctant World Power" illustrates the increasing involvement of the United States in world affairs engendered by the events of the period between the wars. "The Road to Interdependence" outlines the development of U.S. foreign policy from the end of World War II through the onset of the 1970s.

Films

The State Department distributes a four-part film series, "The History of U.S. Foreign Relations," and "From Where I Sit," an examination of how public opinion affects foreign policy decisions.

The History of U.S. Foreign Relations

Using actual locations, paintings, political cartoons, and documentary footage, this series of four 30-minute color films recreates the history of U.S. foreign relations from the American Revolution to mid-1975. "An Age of Revolutions" documents American diplomacy from the American Revolution through the Monroe Doctrine. "Youth to Maturity" traces the expansion of American interests and the evolution of the United States into a major world power prior to the events of World War I. "The Reluctant World Power" illustrates the increasing involvement of the United States in world affairs engendered by the events of the period between the wars. "The Road to Interdependence" outlines the development of U.S. foreign policy from the end of World War II through the onset of the 1970s.

From Where I Sit

This film explores the many conflicting interests and opinions which converge on foreign policy issues and shape our national goals. Using the issues of trade, energy, and arms control, the film provides a basis for discussion of the kinds of decisions and choices confronting policymakers.
